

Exam4 Essay and Multiple Choice (Paperless)

- 1) Once in Exam4, click on Exam Info then Exam Document. For this practice test, use 123456 and click Fetch to bring up the sample exam.

For the Bar Refresher/midterm/final exam, the Document ID number will be provided by the exam proctor.

The screenshot displays the Exam4 software interface. At the top, a menu bar includes "End Exam", "Save", "Edit", "Format", "Exam Info", "Multiple Choice", "Tools", and "Help". The main window is titled "Answer-to-Question-_1_" and contains a document viewer. The viewer shows a "Document ID" field with the value "123456" and a "Fetch..." button. Below the viewer is a progress bar and a "Reset" button. At the bottom of the viewer area are "Side-by-side View" and "Hide" buttons. On the right side, a control panel displays the time "8:53 am", "Camera: N/A", the "exam4" logo, "Belmont University College of Law", "Release > 23.1", "OPEN+NET Exam Mode", and "Practice Exam OPEN LAPTOP NETV". It also features a "Timer" set to "00:00" and two radio buttons: "Insert Answer Separator" and "Show/Hide Doc Stats". The "EXTEGRITY" logo is visible at the bottom of the control panel, along with copyright information: "© Extegrity, Inc. All rights reserved." and "Win 10.2009.22H2".

2) Click Side-by-side View.

Note: You have the option of toggling between the exam question screen, essay answer screen, and Multiple Choice screen or you can do a side-by-side view. If toggling, you will need to click Hide after bringing up the exam question screen to get to the Multiple Choice screen or essay answer screen to answer. Ctrl D or Command D will bring the exam back up on the screen if you have hidden it.

The screenshot displays the Extegrity Exam 4 interface. At the top, there is a menu bar with options: End Exam, Save, Edit, Format, Exam Info, Multiple Choice, Tools, and Help. Below the menu bar, the document ID is shown as 123456, with a 'Fetch...' button and the text 'Sample Multiple Choice'. The main content area is titled 'Multiple-Choice Questions' and contains a paragraph of text. The text reads: '1. Immediately after his graduation from college in June, Stuart went to law school the following September and to marry Sue in December. He called Stuart on the phone and said that if Stuart postponed the completion of his first year of law school, Farrell would give her that he wanted to postpone the wedding. She became so engaged. Two months later, Sue married someone else. Farrell died soon after Stuart began school, but Stuart succeeded. Although Stuart earned excellent grades, he decided that he would not practice the law to want to continue his legal education. After failing law school, he notified Farrell's administrator of his decision. Stuart would have no tuition expense, he expected to be paid the $1,000 cash.' At the bottom of the main content area, there is a progress bar, a 'Reset' button, and a 'Side-by-side View' button. To the right of the main content area, there is a side-by-side view panel. This panel shows the time as 8:55 am, the camera status as N/A, and the text 'EXAM4 Belmont University College of Law Release > 23.1 OPEN+NET Exam Mode Practice Exam OPEN LAPTOP NE'. Below this, there is a timer showing 00:00 and two radio buttons: 'Insert Answer Separator' and 'Show/Hide Doc Stats'. Multiple-Choice Questions

1. Immediately after his graduation from college in June, Stuart announced his plan to begin law school the following September and to marry Sue in December. Stuart's father, Farrell, was afraid that marriage during Stuart's first year of law school might cause him to fail or drop out of school. He called Stuart on the phone and said that if Stuart postponed his wedding plans until after the completion of his first year of law school, Farrell would give him a cash bonus of $1,000 and would pay Stuart's tuition for the second year of law school. Stuart agreed, and called Sue to tell her that he wanted to postpone the wedding. She became so angry at him that she broke off their engagement. Two months later, Sue married someone else.

Farrell died soon after Stuart began school, but Stuart successfully completed his first year. Although Stuart earned excellent grades, he decided that he was not really interested enough in the law to want to continue his legal education. After failing to register for a second year of law school, he notified Farrell's administrator of his decision. Stuart said that although there would be no tuition expense, he expected to be paid the $1,000 cash bonus which his father had promised him. The administrator refused to pay anything.

If Stuart brought suit against the administrator of Farrell's estate for $1,000, Stuart would probably be

(A) unsuccessful, because his contract with Farrell violated public policy.

(B) unsuccessful, because Stuart failed to register for a second year of law school.

(C) unsuccessful, because Farrell's death terminated his offer.

(D) successful.

2. Corman was the owner of a condominium which consisted of an apartment with a patio and a small backyard. When he moved in, he entered into a written contract with Lansman. Pursuant to its terms, Lansman was to perform certain specified gardening services in the yard of Corman's condominium each week for a period of one year, for which Corman was to pay the sum of $50 per month. The contract contained a clause which stated, "Corman hereby agrees not to assign this contract without the written permission of Lansman." Three months after entering into the agreement, Corman informed Lansman that he was selling the condominium to Antun, and asked Lansman to consent to Corman's assignment of the contract to Antun. Because the costs of landscaping materials had increased dramatically in the last three months, Lansman was glad for an opportunity to be relieved of his obligations under the contract, and refused to consent to the assignment. Corman assigned the contract to Antun anyway, but Lansman refused to perform any further work on the yard. After formally demanding performance from Lansman, Antun hired another gardener to do the same work for $75 per month which was the best price Antun could negotiate.
